Business

Class Song

BY

Fred Landry

When school days are o'er
And lessons no more,
Then we must part,
And we're thinking of
The school we love
Where we made our start.
On life's broad business career
We'll think of our school so dear.

We'll be loving you, Commerce,
With a love that's true, Commerce,
Now, that we must go
We would like to show
Our regret on leaving Commerce, Commerce.
Much we owe to Mr. Ellis,
Faculty and Mrs. Davis
We will always try
To keep our standards high,
And to do or die for Commerce.

Class History

This volume of history deals with our last three years of school life. When we consider our advantages during this period, in a school of modern equipment, with its library, club room, cafeteria, assembly, and fine classrooms, we wonder how startling this change and progress in modern education would be to our American ancestors, if they could see our High School of Commerce as it is today and compare it with their country schools.

As other writers have recorded the events and progress of nations, and as other more humble historians have shown the history and growth of the school and classes, we have attempted here to record the history of the class most important to us, that of 1927.

In February, 1924, a great many tribes of savages immigrated to Commerce. These were the Chestnuts, Centrals, Forest Parkers, and Buckinghams. Their manners were crude, their knowledge of civilized life was rudimentary. It was noted that their tribal color was green. They bore with a stoical fortitude the horrible tortures they felt were due them.

To them the first month was a "Century of Exploration." They were forever getting lost in the forest of corridors, and exploring the north, south, east, and west of this great building. Some of the more highly civilized people often had to help them, although when it came to finding the lunchroom, this was always unnecessary.

Then, to their surprise, the Lord Seniors, who are among the oldest settlers, gave them a reception. The Savages were more excited than ever, often breaking into "unrestrained and uncontrollable ecstasies." They were instructed by a speech from the Chief Leader, Mr. Ellis, and entertained by a play given by the Lord Seniors.

Soon afterwards there was a struggle for championship in the Girls' Gym Meet. How the squad practiced for this contest! The final night they marched up and down in front of the judges with high hopes. They waited impatiently for the decision, hoping that they might be the winners, but the more highly civilized IIA's received the cup.

They were beginning to wonder if they would ever be as skilled and cultured as those people that gave them the reception.

Then came vacation time and report cards. They could not be dignified and thoughtful at this time, for they were wild with joy to become I A's.

Having passed the uncivilized period of their history, they became colonists settled in Commerce to do their work in developing character and obtaining knowledge. As they were emerging from the dark ages in December of 1924 they formed an organization with Mrs. Marion H. Davis as Prime Minister. They elected as their leaders:

President—Pauline Lange	Treasurer—Rae Goodman
Vice-President—Angelo Caras	Secretary—Sally O'Brien
Auditor—Dora Golden

The colonists soon advanced to "The Critical Period" of their history, the Sophomore stage. During this semester the young maidens again struggled in vain to win the cup at the Gym Contest, but were defeated by the IIA's.

Then they were working on a new scheme, the first in their social progress, the IIB Social.

This was their introduction into the life of the outer colonies, so they wished to be successful. They trimmed the girls' gymnasium with a shower of colored streamers.

The gathering neighbors were entertained by some of the young girls of the colony, who gave a ukelele selection. These were Fannie Bernson, Olive Wetherell, and Lucille Whiting. After this entertainment, all danced a short time, everyone left feeling that it was a great triumph.

It was evident that the colonists were developing in scholarship, as Roy Dykstra received the gold History Medal.

The colonists were still in "The Critical Period." When they came back to Commerce after a long summer's vacation, they were already for hard work. This year, together with the IIB's, they were to put on the Christmas Assembly and entertain the members of the Old Ladies' Home, according to the custom of the past years.

This time they gave a phantasy in which a number took part. Matilda Schimmel gave a "Little Boy Blue" dance, Melvin Woodlock was "Santa Claus" and was assisted by four fairies, two of which were Rachel Ouellette and Mary Barsam from our colony.

This year they also gave a social in December. The colonists used the same hall as before, but the trimmings were red and green with holly sprays. They were entertained at the social by some of the talented members of the colony. Rae Goodman played a piano solo, and Ruth Jocelyn gave a vocal selection.

It was at this time that a great athletic battle took place, when our football team won the city championship, the first in the history of Commerce. A few of the men of this colony fought in the battle, and the colonists were certainly proud of them. They were Jack "Red" Greenberg, William "Billy" Newton, and George Stanford.

Another victory was won when Frances Bryant obtained the History Medal and Frances Robinson received honorable mention.

Again it was time for election and this year the officers were:

President—Donald Lane	Treasurer—Rae Goodman
Vice-President—Gladys Christopher	Secretary—Madelene Ehrlich
Auditor—Dora Golden

Now we had reached the "Modern Period" of our history, our Senior year.

One event was our IIB Social. For this we kept the same hall and trimmed it with a rose-covered trellis in pink and white.

We were entertained by a "Bell Boy" Dance given by Florence Rook, Olive Wetherell, Fannie Bernson and Matilda Schimmel. This was another successful event.

The Seniors in their last half year had much to accomplish, the first of which was the Freshman Reception, to welcome a new tribe of settlers. This time the senior classes combined and gave the reception. This was held October 19, 1926.

There was a large attendance of both freshmen and parents, the former were only too anxious to show their parents the place where they had decided to settle.

A short speech of welcome was given by Donald Lane, the president, after which the Girls' Glee Club gave two selections, followed by a number from the Boys' Glee Club. Miss Faith Walker sang. Mr. Herbert Englemen did a balancing and parallel bar act, after which there was music by the orchestra.

Our dramatic ability was shown in a play "Kitty's Decision," in which Olive Wetherell took the part of Kitty Clipper; Lillian Gluskin of Mrs. Faston; and Louise Lettelier, Dora, her daughter.

After this play Mr. Ellis, gave a short talk. At this reception there was the largest attendance that ever was known for a Freshman Reception.

Now that we are approaching the end of our high school life, we are to close our historical career with a "Declaration of Independence" to be signed on Graduation Day when we must each take our independent positions in life.

In leaving Commerce these citizens feel that they have learned much and have given little, but they will never forget these days and will always strive to live up to the motto, "Integrity and Industry."

Eunice A. Williston.

Prophecy of the Class of January, 1927

At last I was actually on the train, whizzing rapidly on my way to the first stop on my trans-continental trip. In reality I saw a confused blur of trees, green grass, and houses, but mentally I was seeing quite another picture. It was my last hurried rush for the train.

I have been employed since my graduation from Commerce as a private secretary for the firm of Lepovetsky and Levine, contractors, and now, after five years of hard work, felt that I have earned a long vacation, so at last I started on a journey, accompanied by Pauline Askinas, a former classmate.

My taxi had not arrived, so I had started on foot for the train, but after walking a few steps, a familiar voice hailed me. It was Leonel Martel in his Ford. "Jump in," he said, "and I'll see that you get there in time." But, alas, after about five minutes, the motor stopped. Leonel got out and began systematically to take the engine apart as I have seen him do so many times before. Naturally I was a bit nervous, but in a marvelously short time, he had it reassembled, with only five parts left over. These he put in the back of the Ford, and we reached the station just in time for me to grasp the hand rail of the last car as it pulled out of the station.

I dropped breathlessly into a seat, scarcely noticing the other occupant, a tall, silk-hatted individual with a professional air. Somehow this dignified person looked familiar. He deigned to notice me and then we mutually recognized each other. Yes, it was Paul Kattler, and he told me that he was now the head surgeon in the Bellevue Hospital. He informed me that Ethel Howcroft was his head nurse.

The time passed so quickly listening to his interesting conversation, that it seemed hardly a minute before the brakeman called out, "Hartford!" I glanced at the incoming passengers, among whom was a girl with exquisitely marcelled hair. Upon seeing me and the famous Dr. Kattler, she bowed, and I recognized Lillian Calberg. She joined us and related how she had made a fortune with her new recipe for liquid which makes the straightest hair curl over night. It is best for bald-headed people. But that was not all of her news. That morning she had received a letter from Frances Bryant, who after Commerce days had become a curator in the Museum of Natural History. Imagine Lillian's surprise on reading the post mark, "Fiji Islands." After staring at the post mark for several minutes, she opened the letter and read that the reason for Frances' presence in those wild regions was to try to discover the missing link.

After an incredibly short time we reached New York City. I signalled for a taxi, and to my surprise Ellsworth Waldron was the driver. I told him to take me to the Roosevelt Hotel. Again I was astonished by seeing Donald Lane as manager of the hotel. His experience in managing class affairs must have been valuable, as he was most successful. As I entered the dining-room that evening, I noticed a very impressive and handsome head-waiter whom I immediately recognized as one of my former classmates, Charles Rose. In the course of my conversation with these boys I learned that many of my friends were in New York City.

That evening we decided to go to the Metropolitan Opera House. My chief object in going was to hear Dorothy Dominy, soprano, and Ethel Edwards, contralto, singing in the three main scenes of that evening's production. The orchestra was conducted by Melvin Woodlock. Aune Reigonen was one of the leading violinists.

As we came out of the Opera House and walked along Broadway, my attention was suddenly attracted to the following news bulletin on the Times Building, "Jack 'Red' Greenberg, wellknown athlete sails for Europe to compete in the Olympic games." After winning many records at Commerce, "Red" had specialized in athletics.

PROPHECY (Continued)

The next day we decided to visit the Metropolitan Art Museum. There we found an exhibition of modern paintings by artists of recent prominence. One of these paintings had been done by Craig Baillieul, our class artist.

From New York we took the Hudson River Day Line boat to Albany. As I approached the ticket office, I found that Harold Fisher was acting as the ticket agent.

After we had found our places on the boat, I immediately recognized in the sedate and dignified captain, our "Benny" Landry. He was entertaining a group of girls with his interesting conversation. He had with him George Stanford, as first mate. As George shouted his orders to the crew, I noted that his fine voice had not deserted him.

As we proceeded up the Hudson, Captain Landry pointed out many wonderful estates. This reminded him that Margerita Granados had recently inherited five silver mines in her native land, Colombia, and had purchased the most beautiful of these Hudson estates.

She had immediately gathered together many of the January, 1927, class whom she employed. Eunice Williston was her companion and secretary, Marion McConville her personal maid. I was glad to hear that these girls were still together.

Upon landing in Albany we went to the State House and found that Roy Dykstra was the successful Mayor of the city. From his lofty height, he still found time to chat with us.

We left the State House and walked down Main Street. As we passed the "People's Book Shop," my curiosity was aroused as to the reason for the commotion in the shop. This same curiosity prompted us to investigate and we learned that a new book was just out. The high school students were fighting madly for a copy. This book was, "How to Excel in Studies," written by Stewart Neal and Stanley Newton, famous authorities on this subject.

Sunday we went to church, and heard Lawrence Connaughton preach a sermon on "The Coming Generation." He seemed to be much distressed by youthful frivolity. These sermons were making him very famous.

That afternoon we left for Niagara Falls and arrived there that night. The next morning we took a trip on the "Maid of the Mist." Our guides proved to be Harold Moran and Samuel Goldberg who told us that during the day there was to be a great athletic stunt. Merrill Mason and Leo Backus were going over the Falls in a barrel. I didn't dare to stay and see this thrilling event.

My next stop was in Chicago where I went to the "Silver Slipper Ballroom" and discovered that Thelbert Schnare was the prompter. He was willing to give dancing lessons to anyone who cared to learn, provided he was paid fifty dollars a lesson.

The next afternoon we went on a shopping tour. In Marshall Field's store, in the French Room, we found Rachel Ouellette, Sylvia Figoni, and Mildred Lopardo, acting as the three beautiful mannequins.

Grace Farnsworth was now the head of the dress, suit, and coat departments. She had Esther Gordon, Verna Durkee and Esta Eisner in her employ as assistants. After talking with Grace, I learned that Madelene Ehrlich and Charlotte Ertel were designing French gowns for a very exclusive shop in Chicago.

As we were walking along Lakeside Avenue, I heard someone laughing heartily. Turning around, I saw that it was Mary Foley and Helen Galvin, not changed a bit. We talked and laughed for about a half hour. I learned that they were running a dancing school for all bashful boys. Among their instructors were Fannie Bernson, Matilda Schimmel, Florence Rook, and Olive Wetherell. Olive was teaching the "Angel's Glide," the latest debutante walk.

That evening we decided to take the next step in our transcontinental tour. Our first stopping place was the Yellowstone National Park. In the many luncheon places, I found some of my classmates employed as guides and waitresses. Among the waitresses were Irene Meunier and Florence LaBine, and Helen Winters. Abraham Kasofsky and William Saxon were two of the many guides. I got there just as Abraham was helping a 250 pound lady over some rocks.

My next stop was in Los Angeles. Somehow, as I read the Daily Times, the leading newspaper, the style of the editorials seemed familiar. Later I found out that Ethel Hynes was the editor of this most interesting paper. One item in the paper said that David Ziter was giving a series of lectures before the Parent-Teachers' Association of "How to Attend School Regularly."

We then took a sight-seeing bus and passed a huge building crowded with children. Of course we thought it was a school, but the guide said that it was an orphan's asylum managed by Lillian Flanders, who had become so accustomed to her part in the senior play that she had established this home.

As we passed one of the exclusive bathing beaches, I noticed a sign that said, "Bathing Beauty to be Chosen Tonight!" We decided to go, and who do you suppose was chosen? Margaret Negosnick the winner of many such titles. As a prize Margaret was given a trip to Europe. I understand that she must have left many regretful admirers on these shores.

The next day we started for San Francisco.

We stopped in Hollywood where I saw many of my classmates. Lincoln Squier was directing moving pictures. He had Cecille B. DeMille as an understudy. His leading man was Bernard Holian, while "Billy" Newton and Russell Peterson were featured as his athletic stars. We stayed to see one scene worked out. Our fair Josephine Szymczak was the heroine. Gladys Christopher was the wicked but alluring vamp, while Josephine Zeidman and Myrtle Christensen were in the parts of bathing beauties. Catherine Foley and Harriet LaBroad were conducting a very popular gymnasium class. Their graduates did stunts in the movies under the direction of Lincoln Squier.

Then we completed our trip to San Francisco. It was here that I heard that Irving Clark was posing for the Arrow Collar Company for their street-car and bill-board advertisements.

Ada Righi was now the District-Attorney in the San Francisco Court. I remembered Ada's success in the law class in Commerce. She told me, during our telephone conversation, that Helen Aldrich was the Professor of Economics in the University of California.

The next day we decided to go to Chinatown on the sight-seeing bus. As we drew up to a very dark and mysterious looking building, I noticed two policemen standing in the shadows of a long flight of stairs. Who do you suppose these two policemen were? Ramoth Rees and George Joseph. They said that they had been having a hard time to subdue the many riots in the recent Tong War.

Hyman Smith was the guide who occupied the front seat on the bus and gave us a description of the inside of the various gloomy buildings in Chinatown. I never realized before that he could talk so much.

After a very pleasant trip we returned to San Francisco. As I stepped out of the bus, a woman very smartly dressed came up and spoke to me. I did not recognize her at first, but when she smiled, I remembered her as one of my Commerce friends. Catherine Carney. She was married and living in San Francisco, applying her hard-earned knowledge of home-making to her family. She was out on a shopping expedition, so I suggested that we go to a tea shop and talk over our school days. There we found two of our Commerce friends, Pauline Lang and Beatrice St. Germain. They were getting wealthy rapidly. They had as a next door neighbor, Helen Buckley, who was running a gift shop.

PROPHECY (Continued)

After spending a long time in touring the west, we decided to return to Washington by airplane. This was a very new experience and also very exciting. Our brave pilot was Carl Wood, as calm at 1,000 feet in the air as he was in Commerce. When we reached Washington, we went to visit one of the United States Government Offices and there I found Marion Creed as one of the head accountants. Mildred Young was also there as a typist, turning out perfect copies every time.

Dorothy Gatalee and Sally O'Brien had established a relief mission for the people of the Far East. They have always had tendencies for missionary work.

The next morning we secured a permit to visit the Supreme Court. We listened entranced to the arguments of a young attorney. It was none other than Mary Karoghlanian. When she was taking law at Commerce she always did like to prove various cases. Now her desire had been fulfilled. Maurice Bushey, Elizabeth Budrunas and Signe Nelson were the court reporters, and they still were having many difficulties in reading their notes.

The next day we went to Philadelphia. Our first stop there was at the Capitol Theatre where we saw Dorothy Macia and Theresa McCaffery in a very entertaining vaudeville act. Theresa was singing a solo in her bird-like voice, and Dorothy was playing her violin which had seen many days in the Commerce Orchestra.

That night I left on the Federal Express train for New York City, and as I was speeding along at sixty miles an hour I thought about the wonderful trip I had had, which had been made especially interesting by seeing so many of my former classmates.

Prophecy on the Prophet

March 7, 1934. 10.30 A. M.

At last I am back in good old New York. My, how good it seems! Everything is familiar, places and faces.

Tonight I am having dinner at the Commodore Hotel with three old classmates. It is a great relief to be in a city where you see people whom you recognize and not faces that are all new.

Commodore Hotel. 6.30 P. M.

Donald Lane, who, as you all know, is manager of the hotel, had us ushered to a nice table well screened by palms. The dinner that was served was the most delicious meal that any one of us had ever eaten in our long lives. It was a well balanced, tempting meal that no one could resist, even if on a diet. It was so good that we demanded the waiter to take us to the head chef so that we could compliment him. The waiter smiled, but we could not understand why.

He led us past the tables until we came to the kitchen which was a large, well lighted, bright room with some dozen assistant cooks. We were given seats and told that the head chef would be right out. After a short time the door opened and there stood "Archie," our well loved "Queen of the Lunch Room." "Oh!" was the general gasp that came from us. Then followed a period of rapid chattering which really amounted to nothing.

When we really began to talk sensibly, we learned that after leaving Commerce she had traveled extensively in the United States, meeting many of her old school chums. After returning to New York she chose as her career the work of a dietitian. Her first opportunity to climb upward to success was given to her by Donald Lane. This was a position in the kitchen of the hotel as one of the many assistant cooks. Owing to her efficiency, which no doubt was partly due to her previous training at the High School of Commerce, the manager soon took notice of her exceptional work. When the other head chef left, the position was given to her.

Now, the name, Lumina Archibald, is well known throughout New York, for every large hotel and hospital either copies her menus or seeks her valuable opinion on culinary problems.

Class Will

Know all Men by These Presents, that we, the Class of January, 1927, of the High School of Commerce, city of Springfield, county of Hampden, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, realizing the uncertainty of life and being of sound mind, memory, and judgment, do hereby make, declare and publish this to be our last will and testament, revoking and renouncing all former wills and testamentary instruments by us at any time heretofore made, and do earnestly desire that these, our last requests, be carried out as hereinafter directed.

First. To Mr. Carlos B. Ellis, our principal, we give and bequeath our deepest gratitude and most sincere respect.

Second. To Mrs. Marion H. Davis, our faculty adviser, we leave our profound esteem and thankfulness for her kindly advice and her untiring efforts in all our undertakings.

Third. To Miss Bessie B. Hart, our assistant faculty adviser, we leave our deep gratitude and thankfulness for her untiring efforts in all of our activities.

Fourth. To the faculty we leave our deep thanks for their kindness and patience as well as for the knowledge we have gained from them.

Fifth. To the IIIB Class we leave our seats in the assembly. May they fill them with the attitude that becomes Seniors!

Sixth. Roy Dykstra leaves his secret on how to grow tall to the Freshman Class.

Seventh. The Economics 1 class leaves to Mr. Melville this new joke book.

Eighth. The 5A English Class bequeaths to Miss Dearborn this package of cough drops.

Ninth. Margerita Granados leaves her powder and paint to Doris Miffert.

Tenth. Fred Landry leaves a trail of broken hearts to Walter Drake.

Eleventh. Charles Rose leaves his ability to dodge work and "get away with it" to Iline Madden.

Twelfth. Sylvia Figoni and Mildred Young leave their melodious voices to the cheering squad.

Thirteenth. Lucille Whiting, the inventor of perpetual motion, leaves her patent to talk continuously to Madeline Lambert.

Fourteenth. Sally O'Brien leaves her spontaneous outbursts of knowledge to Miss Bernice Bennett.

Fifteenth. Ethel Edwards leaves her alto voice to the Glee Club for future use.

Sixteenth. Rae Goodman leaves to all class treasurers a magic compound for extracting dues from unwilling victims.

Seventeenth. Ethel Howcrouft leaves her calmness to Barbara Hatch.

Eighteenth. Florence Anderson leaves her blondness to those undergraduates who still believe "gentlemen prefer blondes".

Nineteenth. Gladys Wiemer leaves her success in chewing gum without detection to Alice Williams.

Twentieth. Dorothy Dominy leaves her curls to those who wish a permanent wave.

Twenty-First. Ada Righi leaves her genuine hard work to Dorothy Clarke.

Twenty-Second. Olive Wetherell leaves her stylish hat of the Freshman reception fame to Eleanor Ryan.

Twenty-Third. Marjorie Walters leaves her ability in calisthenics to Madeline Jones.

Twenty-Fourth. Dot Gatelee leaves her ability to think up alibis to any undergraduate who thinks that she can qualify.

Twenty-Fifth. Madelene Ehrlich leaves her business-like manners to Eleanor Broadhurst.

Twenty-Sixth. Carl Wood leaves his ability as an actor to John Burke.

Twenty-Seventh. Bert Schnare leaves his gracefulness and ability to dance to Isadore Zar.

Twenty-Eighth. Frances Bryant leaves her "A" transcripts as an inspiration to all Shorthand 3 pupils.

Twenty-Ninth. Lumina Archibald leaves her school-girl complexion to Marion Wood.

Thirtieth. Jack Greenberg leaves his ability to skirt the ends to Everett Todd.

Thirty-First. Our President, Donald Lane, transfers to Carl Storey, the president of the IIIB class, this gavel with the hope that he will pass it on to the next Senior president.

Thirty-Second. To the Carlos B. Ellis Scholarship fund we leave all of our remaining assets after all just debts have been paid.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hand and seal as our residence in the High School of Commerce, City of Springfield, this twenty-first day of November, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-six.

MELVIN A. WOODLOCK, Attorney

Three Years Before the End—A History

By Dorothy E. Wilmot

Dedicated to our beloved faculty adviser, Miss Marguerite Geary.

INTRODUCTION

A high school education having become almost a requisite for success in our present form of civilization and cultured advancement, it becomes necessary for us to compile a record of our accomplishments and aims that our successors may be guided aright. To accomplish this purpose this history will endeavor to give a brief and comprehensive outline of the various activities of typical American high-school class—the class of June 1927 of the High School of Commerce. We have been greatly assisted during our three years at Commerce by numerous members of the class of '27 who have contributed to its history; to Mr. Ellis, for his splendid leadership; to the faculty; to the classes of 1926 and January, 1927 respectively for their co-operation; and to every individual Commersite who has helped us toward our goal. To the above mentioned we extend our deepest gratitude.

CHAPTER I

As Jack sat in the High School of Commerce assembly, the particular September day in 1924, that was hailed by him and his classmates, as by his predecessors, as "the First Day," his thoughts ran something like this: "Hm, the first day. Wonder if I'm going to like it? Seems funny! They say this is the girls' school, but I can't see it. Plenty of fellows here! Wonder if my career here will please the family? Oh, well, one way or another, it's all the same. It's their fault that I'm to be the first one in the family to break into the expert stenography business.

"Say, now, who's that tall gentleman? Now that's what I call a real man. Say, Bill, who is he?"

Bill—"Why, that's Carlos B. Ellis, Jack. That's our principal."

To which Jack replied, "I'd like to know him, Bill, really know him. I don't suppose I'll be able to, though. There's so many here, I don't suppose—"

"Sh—Jack, he's telling us about our home rooms and our programs."

Thus began Jack's first day. When finally he dragged his weary body to bed that night, he admitted his satisfaction in his family's choice of a school, but was thoroughly confused. Would he ever get used to being called Mr. Marsh, and climbing from the first to the third floors every other period, and rushing down to a crowded, noisy lunch room, only to find the whole class of seniors ahead of him?

He soon adapted himself and with the help of Time, the magic-maker, his greenish hue, proverbial to freshmen, was hardly discernible on the night of the Freshmen Reception, his reception given by the Senior Class.

Close upon this momentous event in our young friend's life, came the first report card. Ah, day of days! Need we mention the results? Without doubt, some things are better left unsaid. Six of these red-letter days (in more ways than one) came and passed on, and almost without realizing it, Jack found himself a sophomore one February day, eagerly directing a newly arrived "Freshy" to go up three flights and down four, to get to the lunch room.

Next in order came the organization of his class, and once again Jack sat in the assembly hall while his thoughts ran thus:

"A gym teacher for an adviser! I never heard of that idea before, but I bet I'm going to like Marguerite Geary! It's a pretty name all right. This is a fine looking class, if I do say so. Why, they carry on this meeting like professionals. What's this? Voting for officers? Let's see who'll get my vote."

As a result of this election, Sperry Morway was elected president of the IA class; Theresa Goodliss, vice-president; Dorothy Wilmot, secretary; and Dorothy Eginton, treasurer.

THREE YEARS BEFORE THE END (Continued)

Thus progressed the second semester until May when, at the annual Girls' Gym Meet, the IA's took third place, much to their chagrin. Jack left school in June with a feeling that, somehow, he had gained more than "book learning." With the help of his new friends, both faculty and students, he had gained an intense school spirit, new ideals, and a definite goal in life. More than that, he had learned to know and understand his school motto: Industry and Integrity.

CHAPTER II

Returning in September, enthusiastic over his vacation but eager to begin again, almost the first word that greeted Jack was football. Football, football,—he heard and thought nothing else. A game with Ho'yoke, a game with Tech., a game with Central! A defeat here, a victory there! The hope of winning, the despair of losing! In the midst of this, came the first social of the Class of '27. In defiance of witches, goblins, and spirits, they held a gay affair on Friday, November 13. Huge black cats and orange 13's were the features of the decoration, with orange and white streamers stretched from one side of the gym to the other. Florence Graham, known as "Our Florence," the class dancer, entertained with a toe dance.

Hardly had the decorations been taken down when our IIB's joined the rest of Commerce in wild rejoicing, for Commerce had won the city championship in football! The first time in the school's history! Such heroes were the boys on the team and such praise was given to "Chief" Myers for his excellent coaching and leadership! During this semester, also, Faith Bull's journalistic ability was rewarded when she was made Editor-in-Chief of "Commerce," a position she held for one year.

But true happiness comes in giving others happiness as well as one's self, so, following the established custom, Jack's class combined with the IIA's and presented a Christmas assembly for a number of guests from the Old Ladies' Home.

It was at this entertainment that Jack decided that his class had something more than its share of talent. Among those who entertained were Florence Graham, Susanna McCurry, Lillian Orbach, Susie Hunter, Gertrude Dean, Doris Holland, Hazel Jones, Rachael Bousquet and Eleanor Moxom.

Class officers were again elected with the following results: Carl Storey, president; Dorothy Wilmot, vice-president; Florence Graham, secretary; Esther Linnehan, treasurer. The election was another novel event for Jack who had never before had the opportunity of voting at a real polling place. He stifled his envy of the Civic pupils who were acting as checkers, counters, and guides, by vowing that when he was a IIB, he'd do the same.

The second social of the class held on Friday, May 15, was a pronounced success, being hailed as one of the most successful ever held in Commerce. Novel decorations, entertainment provided by Florence Graham and Rhea Martin, prize dances, and good refreshments combined to bring about this result.

The annual Gym Meet gave the IIA's another chance to prove their worth which they did with alacrity by winning the silver loving cup offered as first prize. Eleanor Broadhurst, too, brought honor to the class during that semester when she was elected affiliated president of the Nisimaha Girl Reserves.

As the days went by, as report cards brought joy or sorrow, according to the predominant color of the letters, and as vacation drew near again, Jack realized that his choice had been wise, for here one not only received a sound business training, but also learned how to live, and how to be a good citizen.

CHAPTER III

"An assistant faculty adviser" was the news being passed around when Jack returned to school, a IIB. Upon investigation, he learned that Miss Mary Nelligan, a newly-arrived teacher in the Typewriting Department was to assist

Miss Geary in managing the affairs of the Class of '27. Jack made no comment at first, but after one week of a IIIB program he declared that "the faculty adviser certainly needed more than one assistant if her days were half as crowded as his." However, the majority struggled through and not a few won honor for themselves, and their class. The history medal given by the Sons of the American Revolution to that student who excels in American History was awarded to Iris Auld, while Lloyd Mason received honorable mention.

An unusually large class of Babes in the Woods having entered Commerce in September 1926, the IIIB's, co-operating with the IIIA's, started plans for their welcome, which resulted in the semi-annual Freshman Reception. A play, "Kitty's Decision," was given with such success that it was repeated in assembly. Eleanor Macdonald, Florence Miner and Faith Bull represented our class in this sketch. Jack remarked afterward that he wouldn't mind taking some Freshy's place and going all through it again. "For," he said, "when I think that next semester will see me leaving Commerce with its dandy clubs, socials and all-around good times, and all the friends I've made, I rebel and refuse to consider it."

The IIIB social, a football dance, was another triumph in decorations and novelties. True to its reputation of being "different" the IIIB's conducted a most successful dance with Florence Graham, Rhea Martin, Doris Cohen, and Rhea Martens entertaining. A huge crimson and white Commerce banner, seen for the first time, was placed in the gym and afterward given to the lower classes to be used at their socials. Louis Price, a well-known member of the class, was evidently out for prizes that night, for he won both prize dances, receiving a victrola record each time.

As the crowning feature of a hectic semester came the election held on January 11, 1927. Carl Storey was elected president. And here again the Class of '27 showed its independence of custom by voting so that Faith Bull and George Vincent were tied for the vice-presidency. However, a second election under the supervision of the Civics classes was held at which George Vincent won. Now, from his lofty position as vice-president of the Senior Class he frowns mightily at anyone who even dares hint about his former informal title of the Class Baby. Florence Graham as secretary and Esther Linnehan as treasurer completed the list of officers.

According to custom, the Seniors, dignified by cap and gown, marched in and took their places. By a curious coincidence, Jack found himself in the same place as three years before when he had waited for his assignment to a room and wondered about his high school life. His three years at Commerce were ended now. For the last time, his classmates were gathered with him. The next week many would be leaving to take the positions offered them. Others would wait until after graduation to prove what Commerce had done for them. As for himself, Jack wasn't entirely satisfied. He hadn't done his best. He had, in fact, been quite an ordinary student. He might have done some things a great deal better. But in one respect he felt, instinctively, he had surely succeeded. Never would he lose sight of his school motto—Industry and Integrity.

They are engaged, it appears, in a very confidential matter.

Miss Geary seems to be a young woman of serious mien.

Miss Geary—"Hecate, I come here to inquire of the interests of a former charge of mine, the illustrious class of June 1927.

Please tell me of its triumphs and failures in this complex, modern world.'" Hecate—"To be sure. I shall please thee, and now, what hath the magic crystal to give us?"

(Here Hecate performs some solemn gestures and proceeds to tell the career of the class since its graduation.)

Tillie Handwerker is a teacher of science and specializes in electricity. She teaches them how to charge things and to get away with it.

With much pleasure may it be announced that Harold Pierce works much better since he swallowed a bottle of "3 in 1" oil.

Florence Miner is a writer and is doing fables. The latest one is how Doris Holland stayed out all night.

Donald Chaffee is making a great hit with his voice. He's had it fluted in the laundry.

"Kay" Hickey roller-skates home from Ludlow twice every week.

Eleanor Moxom—a gilded butterfly—a beautiful lily—Men are her natural enemies. And Oh, how she loves her enemies!

Carl Storey is going around with Pola Negri (in the revolving doors of a post-office.)

Faith Bull is doing a lot of darning these days. You see IT runs in the family.

Little Gertrude Dean has written a new banana song—"Hanging Out With The Bunch."

First a farmer, then a butter and egg man, and now Irving Clark is the head of a cheese concern and he is the biggest cheese.

"Al" Williams is a well known suffragette. She and "Shorty" Bousquet are trying to pass a bill granting the weaker sex the right to construct roads. However, Howard Cheney doesn't approve, and he holds that any matter relating to roads is a man's job.

John Tesoro has attained great heights as window washer in New York.

Eleanor Broadhurst is a sentimental spinster. Six times she has advertised that a lonely old maid seeks comfort and light in this world; and at last has received an answer—from the gas and light company.

Roland Marriott is now the caretaker of the careful caretaker's daughter. This is the first careless step Roland has ever taken.

Pauline Farr has at last got into the movies. She got in for fifty cents, the same way I did.

George Vincent, the living image of the great Rudolph Valentino, is now playing as the "Silent Partner" in the "Baby Grand Theater." His accompanying partner is Dorothy Wilmot. (So far as we know, she never runs down.)

Iris Auld achieved her long-sought success when she obtained a position as tutor for a crowd of little Spaniards. Her business is to teach them to cook Spanish onions correctly.

Well—our young Charles Castle is now “Bingo the Strong Man” for Barnum and Bailey circus. He’ll be a great help to his mama when he grows up.

Who has not heard of the renowned professor of “Domestic Problems?” The famed Wenonah Hockenberry professes to teach the young ladies how to manage their husbands.

Esther Linnehan and Helen Barnes are taking a course together in “How to Acquire that ‘Come-hither’ Look.”

Kenneth Soutra is a decided bachelor. (There are several others unmentioned.)

Eileen Murphy, “Spuds,” swam the English Channel twice before breakfast the other morning. This breaks the record set by Dolores Barry who “back-stroked” it all the way.

Leo Brodeur and Ruth Fogg have eloped together. (Ruth’s mother helped her to pack).

Eleanor Mack has recently found a field for her inventive genius. She has invented a machine that turns out a “Lizzie” every time you put a nickel in the slot.

Susie Hunter is engineering a boys’ camp. The director was so irresistible!

Helen McGrath and Eileen Chronley are still working on how to make a doughnut without a hole.

Lester Oberheim has proposed and has been accepted—Three guesses as to whom.

Ruth Schenck has a responsible position polishing door knobs in the Hatfield National Bank.

Margarita Thorn is the candidate for the Women’s Party for President of the United States. Her platform is for the better care and instruction of “mere man.”

Wallace Metcalf is preventing the overworking of strong language by producing a comb that doesn’t pull one’s curls almost off.

Agnes Butters is running a chain store (missing link, you know).

Dot Guertin is developing a report card that doesn’t show the red ink marks.

Florence Graham, our will-o-the-wisp, wore out 7,968 pairs of dancing slippers dancing the “Merry Widow Waltz.”

Freda Bozenhard is just at present engaged in the managing of twins.

Milton Madorsky is now a high-stepping actor. He’s the front legs of the horse in the Romeo and Juliet act.

Eleanor Ryan just landed her B. A. In other words, she’s got her man. He was a bachelor, and she used some art to get him.

Gertie FitzGerald is running a home for friendless pussies. Rather kittinish of her, don’t you think?

Eddie Hutton is a chef in the Waldorf. If you want some good “eats” send for Eddie. He specializes in spaghetti and cheese.

Dorothy McDonald is learning ranch life out in Wyoming. Dot always was for the “wide and open spaces,” especially on test papers.

Ashburn Bagley is arousing the ire of late students by passing a fine on every late and sleepy student. He also has patented a bell that rings loudly enough to wake up each student to go to his next class.

Frances Zirkin is a person of some note. She is a Justice of the Peace.

Elton Smith is up in Alaska making “frigidice” refrigerators for the Esquimaux.

Marion Brassard has joined the navy. She says it is inducive to growing tall. Deck-swab’s her position. Seems to us she always did clean things up in fine shape.

Fred Luippold is running a concern that manufactures undemolishable rolling pins. All the pins around his house are already broken; thus the necessity for new ones.

Edith Hildebrandt specializes in “Beautifying Blondex for Budding Blonde Beauties.”

Eskil Bolin is a famed scientist who has founded a new element of heat (hot enough to melt an asbestos polar bear).

Evelyn Taft and Elizabeth Weidner, the Siamese twins of the class, recently astounded the world by producing a new selection for the Commerce Orchestra.

Eva Croto is taking the place of Dorothy Dix in establishing a column in the local newspapers for the lovelorn.

Shirley Chase just married a man six feet two inches in his stocking-feet. Just her size!

Marion Brueckner wears a beautiful glass diamond. You see her fiance is the owner of two or three five-and-ten cent stores.

Harry Mosnitsky was recently elected president of Nicaragua. He got his position by studying a correspondence course.

Lillian Blackhall is the picture of health now. This is all due to Fleishman's yeast cakes.

Herman Albert can make the grandest "pretzels." He learned how while working under Miriam Bartlett, the famous woman chef.

"Abie" Abelow owns one of the most beautiful sanitariums in the country. You can have all the fresh air you want there for ten dollars a day.

Louis Polunsky has given up life as useless. He was buying from the Jews and trying to sell to the Scotch. (Eleanor Macdonald is mentioned as his hardest buyer.)

Curtis Moquin awaits the judgment of her father. He has asked for her hand but not out loud yet.

Laura Konz is the girl next to the end in "Zeigfeld's Fluffy Follies." She learned how to dance while she was in Commerce. Her experience, she claims, was taken by keeping out from under the feet of the mob at lunch time.

Nicholas Pilalas is expected to be cured of his cold by next week. He swears he is going to play his harmonica at an Opera House Concert. (This is a threat and not a promise).

Rose Blume is blooming in a town out West, a modest flower wasting her fragrance on the desert air.

Thomas Brand is the judge in a Colorado court.

Adell Leibling is the owner of a fashionable hotel. Adell only allows eggs that are not more than two weeks old to be used in her hotel.

Marjorie Fountain is keeping house for Lawrence Davis. She and Laurie used to play mud pies on the back steps and that is how it all came about.

Ernest Hall has developed those baby blue eyes into something wonderful. He is known as a second Houdini, and his hypnotic eyes are a constant source of envy.

Esther McCarthy runs her beautiful Ford to town twice each day without having to go back more than six or seven times to pick up the pieces.

Isadore Zar has a life position in the circus as the largest child for his age. "Only eighteen months old and weighs over two hundred pounds." So the sign reads.

Nora Hart is traveling in Europe. She says America is so plebeian.

Leslye Heffner recently published a series of books on "How to Educate One's Husband."

Barbara MacIntyre, the most beautiful creature on earth, so Dan Geary was wont to believe, is touring the Continent as America's "Helen of Troy."

John Lyons is a skipper on the "Annabelle Lee." He skips up and down the banks in search of fresh fish for Friday.

Florence Morin, Margaret Shea, Helen of Troy, and others tried to die their hair red. However, Florence and Margaret have finally decided that once a red is always a red and are retired from that business.

George Gonella is running for Governor of Texas. He'd have to be a Nurmi to keep up with "Ma" Berman (Julia), another candidate for that office.

Marion Branley is a noted member of the Artists' Circle. She paints everything, "Shoes and ships and sealing wax, and cabbages and kings."

Marjorie Laming is due to be an old maid. She declares she'd never marry a man unless he were like Rudolph Valentino. Since "Rudy" is dead and George Vincent is married, she's doomed.

Charles Goldband demonstrates a newer kind of washing machine. His wife, Josephine Schab, now takes in double capacity washing. That's what business efficiency is.

Marion Shaw is on a shooting expedition in Africa. The days there remind her of the last few days of school in spring, she says. Quiet, hot, but full of ominous warnings!

Catherine Hill has introduced a bill in Congress providing for all men teachers. No women—she claims they're too uninteresting.

Doris Colodny is featuring in James Barrie's new film "Sweet Sixteen, Never Been Kissed."

Samuel Pomerantz runs a small hardware shop. He gives people to understand, however, that it is no "bucket shop."

Sylvia Cowen picks off the threads from the coat of Mrs. Jack Bloom, the honorable wife of the President of the United States. She formerly was Beulah Phillips of our crowd.

Raymond Cohen has become so tender hearted he wouldn't lick a postage-stamp. His wife is doing "sob stuff" on the New York World. She is Fannie Polunsky, a former Commecite.

Helen Krauss has graduated from a two and a half shoe to three. It must be Longmeadow air.

Evelyn King is following in the footsteps of her father. Now she is head of the police department. One of the cute little Irish "coppers" is her escort every night.

Arnold Duval recently wrote a new book on "The Trials of an Amateur Suitor."

Jeanne Morawski, "Pola Negri, Jr.," is D. W. Griffith's leading woman in "Why Girls Go Home to Mother."

Susanna McCurry has developed a fine ranch out in the wilds of Indian Orchard.

Edwin Friedman is the new heavyweight champion of the United States.

Someone stole into Ruth Roeder's room and stole all valuables except a cake of soap—the dirty crook.

Anna Davis is engaged to Charlie Chaplin. Movie Stars are so thrilling, she thinks.

Priscilla Goodrich is teaching dainty Greek aesthetic dancing on the high school stage.

Louis Price has gained the name of the meanest man we know. Everytime a person is electrocuted, he puts a tack in the chair.

Maralyn Dempsey declares frankly that men do not interest her any more. Must be she's gonna be married.

Fannie Shor reminds us somehow lately of the "absent-minded professor." We saw her actually forget herself so much as to walk into a shoe shop and ask for a yard of lace they advertised for ten cents. My, love must be a dreadful thing!

Eva Smalley makes patented pants for small boys who must play marbles. "Necessity is the mother of invention."

Sarah Ziplowitch sang beautifully the other night. This birdlike voice of hers was developed by inserting nightingale's glands in place of her own.

All the Sullivans are engaged in the same business. All are manicurists. Louise holds hands with the customer; Mary O. sings the customer to sleep, while he is being torn to pieces by the dire scissors and file of Mary C. Thus you can see what cooperation will do.

Mary Skolnick is a famous golf player. Mary was always a lover of the green, not Irish but just plain green.

Lena Alpert's picture was in the paper recently for a brilliant thesis of "Psychic Phenomena." Deep stuff.

Frances Curto and Augustine Bisson are the starring soloists of the meeting of the "So-fa-me" club this evening. This club is a sister club to the Ancient Order of Cuckoos, whose president is John Metzler.

Muriel Anderson is teaching Greek to a school of little Irishers. Her incentive to be such a noble professor was Mr. A. H. Smith's talk on "Language."

Anita Bleau and Charles Conant are scientifically engaged in the antagonistic spirit of the mosquito and his motive for revenge.

Robert McGraw performs sleight of hand tricks in a small theatre in Boston. The admission is five dollars a couple. Only couples are admitted. It must be he's dreaming of romantic youth.

Agnes Anderson composed a new wedding march as she was tired of the same old march played so many times. This is only her fifth venture on matrimonial seas.

One thing Mae LaDuke always could do was to catch the eye of every fellow going. Well, she always was a good catcher on the girls' baseball team.

Gertrude Law is selling a combination toothpick holder and shoe-buttoner. It is fastened to one's cuff as an extra adornment.

Alice Fitzgerald is a reporter for the social column of the "Morning Bunk." That's an easy job because it's no work to make these society bells ring out their numerous praises.

Ethelyn Fitzgerald, however, is teaching debating in Smith University. She's been married once, so she knows the rudiments of argumentation.

Catherine Fredey is bringing back the lost art of buggy-riding. She says it is much more pleasant and more lady-like than driving one's airplane around all day.

Lucy Savitsky has invented a new bathing suit where you can go into the water without getting wet.

Eleanor Macdonald is frolicking gaily up in the highlands of Scotland. 'Tis a bonnie countrie, hoot mon!

Grace Westling is a prima donna now. She sings all the highest notes better than Galli-Curci. She attributes her rise to fame to a stepladder.

Dora Suher does high class laundry work. It is even said that she is so careful about her work she starches her handkerchiefs to make them look nice.

Abraham Gordon runs a small branch of Ginsberg and Gordon Prune Company. He is engaged mainly in getting the wrinkles from prunes effectively.

Lillian Orbach has followed up a long cherished hobby. She collects antique hairpins. These she covers with crochet and uses them for earrings.

Anna Shepro has established an Exclusive Shoppe for Shrimps. Not short people but fish!

Anna Kalista slipped and fell the other day for a handsome young dishwasher in the B. and A. lunchroom, namely, Edward Reynolds.

The last we heard of Esther Romsey she was planning a cruise to the South Sea Islands to bring back her husband who immigrated there several years ago "on business."

Helen Poganitsch has no use for roller skates. Recently while skating she threw her arms around the present son-in-law of John D. Rockefeller to save herself from falling and after pulling herself together found it to be our famous Joseph Wynn.

Margaret Reilly cuts a remarkable figure in the Fifth Avenue Shops. She's a dressmaker.

The other Riley, Eleanor, took a trip lately to Hatfield to see if the town was full of hats as she'd been told.

Inspired by an essay she read of the homely life of Lincoln, Mildred Syrett has been feeding her boys on corn meal mush, in hopes they'll pattern after him.

Elizabeth Spring is publishing in the scientist's magazine an article on the "Unusually Beloved Traits of a Grasshopper."

Esther Sheriff and "Hugo", her Tech Husband, are now on the outs. They can't decide whether little "Hugo" will go to Commerce or Tech.

Imagine Claire Witkop a duchess. Nevertheless, she married a grand duke from Rumania, supposedly a cousin of Queen Marie, and she's now laundering the duke's shirts very beautifully.

Gertrude Dumas succeeded in climbing one of the highest mountains in

Switzerland. Her incentive was to get away from a monstrous old mouse that had become attached to her.

Ruth Hart is the sullen and fiery strike leader from the chocolate factory in Hoboken. She declares the girls were made to cut down their candy consumption and not allowed to eat over one and a half ounces per day. These conditions, she asserts, are unbearable.

Bertha Kamuda runs a bus company. Guess she's getting back at the trolley company for returning her Canadian dime.

Rose Slove is in possession of the most beautiful pearl in the world. While deep sea diving in Connecticut, she got her ears full of gravel and carried away this pearl.

Marion Short is quite a brilliant mathematician. She attributes her success to the heavy studying she did in Room 210 while at Commerce.

Irwin Franklin knows no other better argument for enforcing his viewpoint on his better half than a small paddle made rather flexible.

Isaac Levine is starboarder in the "Letmealone Hospital." His recent fight with Gene Tunney caused his accident.

Antoinette Steiner has refused to wash another dish, and has developed a dish washing machine that can be folded up into a card table.

Out in a dinky little town in Montana, the name of Hazel Jones spells "law." She's chief sheriff, town clerk, justice of the peace, and hotel keeper. Her husband works as her office boy. That efficient gentleman is James McCormick.

Eileen Perkins resolved that she'd never change her name for any man, so she married Harry Perkins, a well-to-do janitor of the Hickwele Hotel.

Dorothy Galeucia has invented a lipstick that isn't transferable from lip to cheek.

Jennie Larned counts the powder-less noses on Main Street for a report for the Scholastic Magazine.

Another one of the Joneses of our class is doing well. She sells tornado-proof houses to the Floridans. Our brilliant Beatrice Jones is the woman in question.

"The day has come when women are no longer in dire servitude." This is an extract from the famous speech of Alice Linehan now running for Congress. His name is John Congress.

"Once I saw a little bird hop, hop, hop." Thus recites Timothy O'Brien, the warden at New Life prison in Baltimore. "I cried to my little bird, stop, stop, stop! This little birdie flew upon the long high prison wall—and now for losing that jail bird, I can't eat meat at all!"

There are a lot of people who'd like to be in this young woman's shoes. She (Agnes Donald) is setting the style by wearing shoes that have five dollar bills for a lining.

Betty Wright is playing with the waves on Nantasket Beach. She is the latest debutante of the season and declares the beach is better than any dance floor she ever skidded on.

Beverly Wilson has made a picture surpassing "The Plastic Age."

Hazel Hunt is still talking about the weather, and two guesses as to what else.

Elwin Oliver started out as an understudy to Gloria Swanson, but now is a leading star among the "east side" lights.

Henry Schlamp is suffering from a bad case of lalalallpiazza. (That mentioned part of the body is in the upper regions of the axquita kiazza).

Harley Shastany, as the "Sport King of America," has recently published a notice of his sixth marriage intentions.

Helen Hall is a model for Rose O'Neil's "Kewpies," pleasingly plump and pretty.

Nan McNeil has a candy store on Broadway. Nan was always such a sweet young thing!

Rhea Martin has been understudying Ella Cinders. Rhea has the best requisite for that role, a boyish silhouette.

CLASS PROPHECY—Continued

Alice Conroy is an artist model for a celebrated artist in Paris. We hear there's been a revolution in Art over there.

Eleanor Ehrgood is a pastry cook in the New England Restaurant. Due to previous experience in Commerce she certainly can squeeze the dough.

Ethel Shapiro and Doris Cohen, "Beloved enemies," are again on the rampage. They are both heatedly trying for the bubble-gum championship.

Florence Parker has made the darlingest creation of a dress. The long and short of it is that she made it of only one and a quarter yards of silk trimmed with a foot of lace. Dresses are getting so elaborate nowadays.

HECATE—"Well, my young woman, I have told you all that I can find about these proteges of yours. Cross my palm with silver."

(Miss Geary pays him and goes out.)

HECATE—"Ah me! Small pay, but—what's this! Why, this is only a fake dollar with a request to visit the "Clothe-the-Family" Store on Main Street!

Curtain goes down as Hecate tears his hair and raises a commotion.

Jack Bloom, the woman-hater of the class is sojourning away up in the Alps, temporarily away from the ladies.

Rodney Cook has graduated from his anaemic Ford to a Stutz. His flivver wore out while transporting former Commerce "grads" to and from work in the morning.

One of the most famous women lawyers in the country is Theresa Goodliss. Her rise in popularity is due to her training under Mr. Belding F. Jackson in Commerce.

Catherine Barry now holds the record for "Soda-shaker." She was a good mixer anyway.

Ah! A woman dentist who does her work well, and is also attractive. Miss Hazel Miller certainly takes the cake for "painless dentistry done artistically."

Ovagam Tarpinian is a fur seller in the "roaring Forties" in New York City. Evidently he is succeeding for he just bought a ten million dollar home next door to Mary Jakuboski, a retired screen star.

"Sylvia Cooperman's Dictionary" is the latest novel of the season having between its pages a full "flapper's" vocabulary.

Goldy Winniman is the broadcaster for the P. D. Q. station. It is said she can tell such exciting bedtime stories.

Mary Hitas recently advertised for a competent maid who could cook, sew, launder, sing, and be a companion to her outside of work hours. Our ambitious and capable Anna O'Leary applied and so far as we know is filling the position well.

Harriet Shpetner is appearing in person this week at the Capitol. She is the most famous society leader of today and the only one who doesn't trace her lineage back to that well-filled ship "Mayflower."

Lloyd Mason, wealthy ranch owner from Montana recently retired from business and is travelling with his wife, formerly Miss Marguerite Perron, in Sweden.

Anna Gluskin makes known to the world her experiences in getting thin, and her hairbreadth escapes from candy and ice cream all in a little book "The Slender Figure."

Little Lillian Simcovitz, long-time owner of the "World's Fastest Talker and Most Profuse Giggler" recently lost her title to Grace Johnston, an able opponent.

Sylvia Steinberg won the beauty contest in Porto Rico, last week. My, what illustrious members were in this class!

Jennie Selibovsky is a premier danseuse in Paris. Another one of our little butterflies.

Lena Fortini is teaching a private class how to run a Remington efficiently. Her experience with the one in 310 gave her many valuable pointers.

FINIS

Prophecy on the Prophet

Wandering along the Champs Elysees in Paris one spring evening, I decided to stop in the library to pass a few pleasant hours. After spending a half hour reading some French short stories, I proceeded to the large American Room. Looking over the periodicals which were scattered about the reading tables, I discovered, much to my surprise and pleasure, a Springfield newspaper dated December 29, 1949.

At the first glance a familiar name caught my eye. Reading on, I found that the new addition to the High School of Commerce had just been completed. This was made necessary by the enrollment of 20,000 pupils. This, I believe is the largest enrollment of any high school in the United States.

Turning over the pages, I found that a classmate, Alice Ellett, was being hailed as another Walt Whitman by reason of her series of startling poems entitled "Paris Streets." This surprised me little, for Alice had shown poetic talent very early in life. Following this came an announcement that as a reward for her famous work she was offered a position as head of the English Department at the High School of Commerce in Springfield, Mass.

My time being limited, I hurried from the library resolved to come again and to look for more news of the Class of '27 of the High School of Commerce.

June Class Song—1927

Tune—"SAILING"

Words by Alice Linehan

At Commerce High we've learned a lot;
To useful things we've given thought;
There's English and Geography,
Accounting and Stenography.
We hate to go, although we find we must;
But don't forget, to "Commerce" we'll be just;
Oh! here's to the teachers, and here's to our principal, too;
We will always think of them as being true.

Chorus

"Commerce," "Commerce," we will be true to you.
Although we travel various ways, we'll always remember you.
"Commerce," "Commerce," we must say goodbye,
To the one we love best, of all the rest,
Our dear Old Commerce High!

Will of the Class of June, 1927

Know all by these presents, that we, the Class of June 1927, of the High School of Commerce, in the city of Springfield, the county of Hampden, and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, being of sound mind, memory, and judgment, do hereby make, declare, and publish this our last will and testament, and do earnestly desire that these, our last requests, be carried out as hereinafter directed.

1. To Mr. Carlos B. Ellis, our beloved principal, we give and bequeath our continued appreciation for his wise guidance throughout our years at Commerce.

2. To Miss Marguerite J. Geary, our faculty adviser, we give and bequeath our heartfelt gratitude and deepest admiration for her ever ready guidance and help.

3. To Miss Mary Nelligan, our assistant faculty adviser, we bequeath our sincere appreciation of her help to us at all times.

4. To all members of the faculty who have never failed to be our friends and advisers, we bequeath our sincere gratitude and deep appreciation for the help rendered to us.

5. We bequeath this blank check to the Carlos B. Ellis Scholarship fund, to be filled out when all our debts are justly paid.

6. To the rest of Commerce, we leave inspiring memories of our matchless achievements.

7. To all forthcoming Commencementers, the entire class leaves the High School of Commerce.

8. To our beloved Alma Mater we leave our lifelong devotion and loyalty.

9. To the coming Senior class we leave our superiority complex and dignity. May they do full justice to this legacy.

10. We leave to Mr. G. Donald Melville a bottle of red ink, so sorely needed since his last marks were entered.

11. We leave a Canadian dime with which to start a fund for a daily freshman milk supply, in order that they may become, like the June class of 1927, hale, hearty, and handsome Seniors. We appoint Mr. Belding F. Jackson as trustee of this noble fund.

12. To all the verdant freshmen we leave our unexcelled ability to proceed in a leisurely manner to the lunchroom.

13. Thomas Brand leaves his ability to manage anything or anybody in the High School of Commerce to anyone who shows promising signs of measuring up to his standards.

14. Gertrude FitzGerald cheerfully bestows on Madeline Dougherty her knowledge on the subject "Why Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

15. Marjorie Laming bequeaths this trusty vehicle to Miss Teresina Bianchi, who may need it to catch the last car for that ill-fated town of Longmeadow.

16. Alice Linehan leaves her ability to make the maximum honor roll, whenever she wants to, to Dorothy Doran.

17. Florence Graham, after giving much serious thought to the matter, finally decided to leave her dancing slippers to Rose Goldring.

18. Pauline Farr bequeaths her well-worn list of bluffs to Esther Griffin, with no fear for their continued success.

19. Carl Storey leaves the very perceptible crease in his trousers to Raymond Monahan as a future encouragement.

CLASS WILL (Continued)

20. To any one who can qualify, Ruth Hart leaves her ability to doze in shorthand class and still absorb all available knowledge on that subject.

21. Nan McNeil bequeaths her mortal slowness to Janet Wiseman.

22. Nicholas Pilalas, chief aid in decorating the gym for class socials, leaves his marvelous acrobatic ability to Herbert Englemann.

23. Esther Sheriff leaves much valuable information on the art of learning to play the piano in twenty-four hours, to Beatrice Watson.

24. Hazel Miller passes on her air of undefiled innocence to Helen Wheeler.

25. Dorothy Wilmot leaves her knack for doing six things at once to Mary Napolitan.

26. Esther Linnehan leaves her ability to reduce the contents of one's pocket-book to all future class treasurers.

27. Dolorese Barry bestows on Madeline Jones her "sneaks," used on all occasions for her famous athletic performances.

28. To Miss Carolyn Tufts, we leave a new cash register which may help to relieve congestion in the lunch lines.

29. Lloyd Mason leaves his power of locomotion, such as it is, to all retarding freshmen.

30. Mae La Duke leaves her big brown eyes and sunny smile to all flirtatious maidens, of which we already have a surplus.

31. Helen McGrath leaves her desire to giggle on all occasions, frivolous or solemn, to Helen Cornell, who is well started on her career.

32. We leave a new jazz record to Miss Eleanor M. Walker, which we hope will be more to the liking of her typewriting students.

33. Lillian Orbach leaves her celebrated freckle lotion to Mary Hoar.

34. We leave Miss Bessie Fisher a new pair of black stockings to be used when her present stock gives out.

35. Mr. Leslie S. Shipway's Economics I class leaves him an orange with which he can illustrate his examples in class more clearly.

36. To Miss Alice M. Halligan, we leave this certificate in recognition of her remarkable skill in the lost art of penmanship.

37. Helen Barnes leaves her recipe for getting the most out of a pound of onions to future cooks at Nisimaha suppers.

38. Leslye Heffner and Lester Oberheim leave the constitution of the "Mutual Admiration Society" in the care of Mr. A. H. Smith.

39. We bequeath these toys to Mr. Stanley O. Smith to keep his home room quiet between bells.

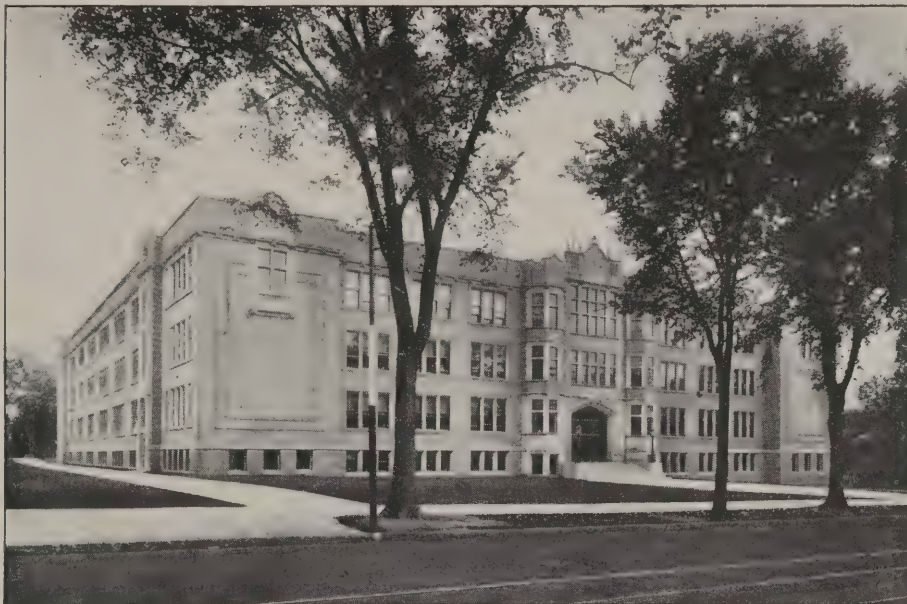

40. We bestow a spare tire on Miss Christine Lewis to be used on her Ford in case of emergency only.

41. To Miss Jane Roberts, we leave a dummy cop to be installed permanently in the main corridor, so she will always know his exact location.

42. Florence Miner and Alice Ellett jointly bestow their poetic abilities on a certain poet, Mr. Edgar A. Guest.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hand and seal at our residence in the High School of Commerce, City of Springfield, this twenty-fifth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-seven.

ELEANOR HOPE MACDONALD, Attorney
Springfield, Massachusetts

The High School of Commerce

Will for the Willer

We Seniors take with us the person of Eleanor Macdonald, the willer, when we leave Commerce in June, 1927. I, being one of that body, have been duly appointed to leave with certain people of Commerce a few personal possessions of the willer, as she has expressed the desire to have them distributed.

1. To Mr. Melville she leaves this bunch of forget-me-nots, with the hope that he will ever remember her as one of his star journalists.
2. To Beatrice Watson, she leaves her make-up box as an aid to local color for any future Commerce play.
3. To Mildred Pennington she passes on the peaches and cream complexion, willed to her by Eleanor Jefferson of the class of January 1926. She hopes Mildred will, on graduating from Commerce, leave it to someone, in order to let Nature reign supreme on the face of at least one girl Commercite.
4. To Dorothy Andrews, she leaves the most envied of all her possessions, her curly hair.
5. On Ann Clark she bestows her greatest accomplishment, that of entering into all school activities, and yet secure an honor card.

The remainder of her property, she leaves to Commercites that come after her, to confiscate, appropriate, and apply to their own personal uses as they may desire.

CARL STOREY

The tacks our brave Carlie had left on the floor
Have punctured his feet, and he waddles no more.

MARION BRANLEY

Go where I've gone, and be content.
("That we can't do 'till we know where you went!")

ROLAND MARRIOTT

Under green grass rests his bones—
He died of Geometric groans.

"TESSIE" GOODLISS

Lollipops to Tess spelled danger,
But of them she did partake—
Now, she's howling loudly somewhere,
Keeping all the dead awake!

LENA FORTINI

This sweet little girl, a fact we bemoan,
Died in the parlor all alone.

TIMOTHY O'BRIEN

Behold the place where he rests in sweet peace,
Of his wife's first light (?) biscuits he had a huge feast.

GERTRUDE FITZGERALD

Oh sad to relate, and mournful as well—
We know where she's gone, but we'll never tell.

SAMUEL POMERANTZ

Fooling with glycerin may be all right,
But, somehow our Sammy is now out of sight.

LILLIAN ORBACH

Tho' she's gone and life is drear,
Think back far, as year by year
She measured up against the wall
And died because she couldn't grow tall.

The Class of June, 1927, Suggests That:

Miss Jane Roberts donate her solution of the traffic problem to New York City.

Mr. A. H. Smith deliver more "lectures" in class.

Mr. Melville take one of his own tests.

Mrs. Madsen give "Baby Louis" a trial. (The heels, of course).

Miss Gladys Palmer never lose her wonderful smile. (It brightens up Home Management).

Mr. Masters advertise more. (Four out of five see him too late, you know).

Miss Geary take up advising as a profession.

Miss Hart bring back one of those English castles on her next trip abroad.

Miss Halligan try some of those famous tests for the feeble-minded at a faculty meeting.

Miss Rankin send the first perfect paper she finds to any convenient historical museum.

Mrs. Chesson introduce some new names for the same old ailments that attack students just before a test.

"Chief" Myers take up the added task of acting as referee in Miss Grant's shorthand classes.

Mr. S. O. Smith be presented an aluminum medal for his praiseworthy work in explaining "Why Girls Are More Brilliant than Boys?"

Mr. Potter install arm chairs and the latest magazines for use by treasurers who try to pass in money.

Room 108 (supervised by Miss Christine Lewis) be re-named the metropolis of Commerce.

Mrs. Williams compile and publish a list of those "helpful little formulas" that will solve anything.

Miss Walker's favorite saying, "Don't look scared! One test won't kill you," be written in inch high letters in every room.

Miss Fisher reveal the process by which she gets a natural wave in her hair.

Mr. Walker who "smiles at miles" start a fund to establish a recreation farm in Wilbraham for overworked students.

Whoever owns the "Commerce Kitty" donate it to any lunch table on the east side of the lunch room as a mascot.

DOROTHY E. WILMOT

Class Poem

The three golden years that we've spent here
Were filled with sorrow and joy.
Now, at the time of parting,
There's grief to girl and to boy.

The lessons we've learned from our text books,
The teachings that we've gleaned from life.
Will ever bring back the memory
Of our dear old school, Commerce High.

Our path is now new before us
With many a long hill to climb,
But, nevertheless, with our training
We're hoping we'll get there in time.

We surely shall miss all the teachers,
The paper, the sports, and the plays;
And we have a feeling that, maybe—
We shall wish to be back here some day.

Come rain, or come shine, we must leave you,
Our Alma Mater so dear,
And we truly shall try to stand by you,
Your standards hold high thru the years.

The High School of Commerce football team, though handicapped by the loss of six veterans through graduation, held their own in the season of 1926.

Commerce had hard luck outside of Springfield, while at the home games they displayed their real fighting spirit.

In the interschool games the Crimson tied Central at 6-6, beat Cathedral, 6-0, and bowed to Tech in a hard-fought battle, 14-9.

FOOTBALL (Continued)

The Crimson eleven was admired for its pluck when it staged a magnificent comeback in the second half of the game against Tech. Although unable to top the lead piled up by the Tiger foemen, it displayed teamwork and skill second to no schoolboy team in the past decade. An event which will never be forgotten is "Billy" Newton's 44-yard drop-kick for three points. Both college men and coaches were astonished and predict a wonderful future for this versatile athlete. Another event was the defeating of the strong Greenfield eleven valley champions of last year, 6-0.

Following is the season schedule and results:

Deerfield 24.....	Commerce 5
Commerce 6.....	Greenfield 0
Commerce 6.....	Cathedral 0
New Britain 15.....	Commerce 0
Hartford 13.....	Commerce 6
Tech 14.....	Commerce 9

The soccer team's drab season had one bright spot in it—the defeat of the International College team. It was the first set back for the C9llegians in two years; after having won 13 straight games.

The leading Crimson scorer was Kennedy who was picked with Rees for the all-city team. Rees was selected for the all-valley eleven, also.

The Commerce basketball team, led by Captain Raymond "Feet" Monahan, was a well-followed team both by high school students and the general public.

Commerce started out by winning from Turners Falls, Monson, and Vocational and was soon thought to be excellent timber for the city championship. The first set-back was received from the Evening High School quintet.

BASKETBALL (Continued)

In the inter-school games Central was easily eliminated in the run for the title. At the end of the season, Tech led by one game, Commerce and Central were to play the last game of the series. Only by winning from Central could Commerce tie with Tech. The game was one to be remembered. Tech brought a cheering squad to help cheer Central to victory. Commerce won a hard fought game in the final two minutes. The season ended with Commerce and Tech sharing the title.

Hockey, although a new sport at Commerce, promises to be a close second to basketball for prominence in the winter season.

Commerce hockey team displayed strength in the inter-school games, winning from Central and Vocational, but losing the championship to Tech in the final clash. Much is expected of the team next year.

William Newton

Proud is the January class of 1927 to number among its ranks the stalwart form of William Irving Newton, star athlete. In recognition of his excellent athletic ability, sportsmanship, and strength of character, Newton, at the completion of his high school career, was given a special award by the High School of Commerce faculty athletic committee.

Newton's rise in school athletics was, from the beginning, gradual but sure.

In his freshman year he gained an end position on the football team and displayed favorable form throughout the season. When basketball practice began Billy tried out for his class team. It was not long before his natural sense of leadership asserted itself, for he was elected captain of the quintet, which, under his successful guidance, succeeded in winning the coveted school championship.

The following fall Newton again annexed a varsity position on the football eleven and through his excellent playing was largely instrumental in aiding the team to win the Interschool Football Championship. By virtue of his superior qualities he was selected as end on the mythical all-city first team and of the all-valley second team.

That same year Newton played as guard on the Crimson basketball aggregation. He and Red Greenberg, paired together, formed a backfield that was the terror of opposing teams.

During his last year of football Newton was unanimously elected captain of the eleven. Throughout the season Billy proved the mainstay of the Crimson but the climatic point of his pigskin career was reached when, in a game against Tech, he booted a 45-yard field goal to place himself foremost among school-record-holders. As a reward for his meteoric playing Newton was for the second successive year chosen on the all-city team.

Although his basketball activities were cut short in his senior year by graduation, Billy, during the few games in which he did play, proved to be the whole back field of the Crimson quintet, and continually provided thrills for the crowds by his spectacular defensive exhibitions.

Newton not only shone in athletics but was prominent in other school affairs. He was a member of the Student Council for three years and during his senior year was chosen president of it. Several club rosters contained his name. In addition to all this he was a good student.

His activities will ever fill a page in Commerce history and he will always be remembered as—William Irving Newton, athlete, sportsman, and scholar.

Winning one game and dropping the next the 1926 Crimson baseball team ended the season with six games to its credit and six games lost. Captain Herman White's leadership combined with Bev. Wilson's work on the mound and with the stick were largely instrumental in helping Commerce make such a favorable showing.

Two setbacks by Deerfield and St. Thomas at the start of the season raised an invisible barrier of inconfidence which Coach Myers' charges had to overcome in later games. Central fell the first victim to the Crimson, 4-0, parallel to the opening of the interschool games.

The locals annexed two of the following three games, their only loss being to Cathedral, 7-4. The vanquished teams were Vocational and Mass. Aggies (two-year men).

Commerce again defeated Central in the second interschool conflict and so definitely put the Blue and White out of the race for the city Championship.

In the first battle with Tech the Crimson was entirely outplayed and ended on the short end of a 16-2 score. But after polishing off Bay Path and Monson the Hill-toppers again faced the Orange and Black with a craving for revenge.

This time the Elliot-Streeters were forced to the limit to defeat a fighting, rejuvenated Commerce nine. Tech through receiving the "breaks" in the game won, 13-12.

Only two members of the team were named as All-City material. They were Jack Greenberg, an outfielder, and Bev. Wilson, a pitcher.

Although it failed to capture a single meet the 1926 Crimson track team, handicapped as it was, by the lack of a decent training field, displayed impressive strength in several track and field events.

In the first meet of the season Commerce lost to South Manchester. 72 1-6—25 5-6. Greenberg was the only Commerce man to star in this meet.

The Crimson's next opponent, Williston, also proved too strong for the local boys. When the points were finally tallied it was found that Commerce was on the tail end of a 63-36 score. Rees aided Greenberg in piling up the majority of Commerce's points.

A triangular meet among Commerce, Suffield and Enfield formed the third encounter of the season. The Springfield athletes placed second in this conflict with 29 points, while Suffield won with 70 points. Enfield trailed with nine markers. As in previous meets Greenberg proved the backbone of the Crimson team. Stanford, Cheney, Squier and Davis also annexed a number of points.

Tech 70, Central 37 1-2, Commerce 19,—the score, of the first interschool track meet ever to be held among the three Springfield High Schools, tells eloquently enough the results of this fray. By winning the mile and half mile, from a strong field, and capturing a third in the short put, "Red" Greenberg placed as second high scorer in the meet.

Throughout the season, Jack Greenberg, by repeatedly negotiating the mile and half mile in remarkably fast time and by constantly gaining points in the javelin throw, shot put, and broad jump, proved the mainstay of the Crimson team. Greenberg's greatest feat of the season was the establishing of a new school record for the javelin throw. In the first meet of the season, "Red" hurled the javelin 135 feet, two inches.

Ramoth Rees, Lincoln Squier and Laurence Davis deserve praise for the creditable manner in which they performed. Rees was the Crimson's best bet in the broad jump, while Squier continually annexed second or third places in the 220 and 440-yard run. Davis showed up well in the pole vault.

INTIMATE COMMENTS

1. The Commerce Girls' Hockey Team won the 1926 championship by defeating Central, 5 to 2.
2. This season's team has shown great improvement in team work, and it was probably through this accomplishment that they gained such a decided victory.
3. At the beginning of the second half things were looking rather dark for Commerce until Spud Murphy's "Irish" was aroused, and then Central was powerless to score.
